Digitize Hub Website Review

Oct 16, 2026 · @Suleman Lakhani

Review of the demo site at digitizehub.vercel.app, covering Home, About, Services, all five service pages, Portfolio, Pricing, Blog, Contact, FAQ, Privacy and Terms. The review is based on page content only, not the rendered site, so layout, animation and mobile issues aren't covered.

🔴 Critical: fix before any lead sees the site

1. Privacy Policy and Terms pages return 404. Both footer links are broken, but the site collects names, emails and phone numbers through forms. That's a legal gap (Canadian privacy law, since the entity is Canadian). Meta ads also expect a working privacy policy on the landing domain.
2. The Pricing page has no prices. The page headline says other agencies make you book a call to hear a number, "Here they are." Then each card says "Starting from" followed by the tier name (Silver / Gold / Platinum) instead of an amount. The page contradicts itself in the first scroll. The home page pricing section has the same problem.
3. A placeholder is still live in the FAQ. "Our websites start at [Price] CAD" appears on both the home page and the FAQ page.
4. The only testimonial is a placeholder. It's "Sarah Williams, CEO – XYZ Company" with initials "sw" as the avatar, and it repeats on every page. A lead will spot "XYZ Company" instantly.
5. The About page promises proof the site doesn't provide. It says "Proof Behind Every Claim – every claim on this site has a number, a name, or a link behind it." Meanwhile:
   - The Trustpilot and Clutch logos aren't linked to any profile.
   - The "Google" and "Clutch" badges on the service pages show no rating and no link.
   - "200+ projects", "6 years" and "99% satisfaction" have nothing backing them.
   - The testimonial is from XYZ Company.

   If these numbers can't be supported with real case studies, remove or soften them. A lead who asks "can I see some of the 200?" ends the deal, and misleading business claims are also a legal risk in Canada. "From startups to enterprise brands" has the same problem if we don't take enterprise work.

6. About 17 named people are shown with no context. Elena Rostova, Marcus Thorne, Arthur Pendelton and others appear on Home and About, each repeated 4 times. The site never says whether they are clients or team members. With no company, role or quote, they read as stock photos with invented names, which hurts credibility more than having nothing.

🟠 Lead-conversion and trust issues

7. "Book a Call" doesn't book a call. Every "Book a 20 Minute Call" button goes to the contact form. Add a real calendar (Calendly or Cal.com) or rename the button "Request a Call."
8. There's no WhatsApp button. For leads coming from Meta ads, a WhatsApp or click-to-chat button is often the highest-converting contact option, and our WhatsApp number isn't anywhere on the site.
9. Both offices list the same phone number, and it has a New York area code (929). That undercuts the line "someone is always in your time zone." Either get local numbers or drop the time-zone claim.
10. All social icons link to "#" (Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn, Pinterest). An agency selling social media marketing with no social links is a red flag. Link real profiles or remove the icons.
11. No real person is shown anywhere. The site promises "one person to call," but there's no founder or team section and no named contact. Adding Luke or the team with photos would help a lot.
12. Case studies are fake links. Every service page shows the same three projects (Sapforce, Packsy, Finovate) with ↗ arrows, but nothing links anywhere. The SEO and Social Media pages show website and app design work as their "case studies," with no rankings, traffic or lead numbers.
13. The portfolio has no context. It's 67 images labelled only "Social creative 1," "Website design 3" and so on: no client, no industry, no result. Yet it says "each project was built to generate leads." Only 8 items are website design, even though websites are the core offer.
14. The Calgary address may be residential. Panorama Hills is a residential neighbourhood, so check what "View on map" shows a lead. Also add the registered Canadian business name to the footer for credibility.

🟡 Logical inconsistencies

15. The site positions us as design-only. The service pages are "UI/UX Design" and "Mobile App Design." The app page says we hand Figma files over "so developers build" it. Yet the hero says "Web, Apps," the FAQ mentions React Native and Flutter, the lifecycle section claims Build, Deploy and Maintain, and our ads sell development. There's no Web Development, App Development, Hosting or Maintenance service page.
16. Timelines don't add up. The "How a Project Runs" steps total about 5 to 9 weeks (1 wk + 3–5 days + 1–2 wks + 2–4 wks + 3–5 days). The FAQ and Services page both say websites launch in 3 to 6 weeks.
17. Locations are inconsistent. The site says "Calgary and Georgia" in some places and "Calgary and Atlanta" in others, and the office address is actually in Marietta. Pick one wording.
18. Target market is inconsistent.
    - Home says Canada and the USA.
    - The FAQ says North America, Europe and worldwide.
    - The service FAQs say US, UK, UAE and Southeast Asia.
    - The UI/UX page heading says "Company in USA" only.
19. Ownership vs. managed hosting is unclear. The FAQ says domains and hosting belong 100% to the client. The lifecycle section says "infrastructure we manage" and "one invoice." Clarify how hosting and maintenance fees work so it doesn't look like a hidden catch later.
20. Service page FAQs are copy-pasted. The SEO, Social Media and Branding pages all carry the UI/UX FAQ, including "What results can I expect from better UI/UX design?" and "We design in Figma."
21. Forms don't match each other.
    - Budget: the Contact page starts at $1,000; the service-page forms start at $2,000.
    - Currency: the FAQ says CAD, while the forms just say $.
    - Services: neither form offers Social Media Marketing, and the inline forms don't offer Branding either, even on the Branding and Social Media pages themselves.
    - "How did you hear about us" options differ between the two forms.
22. The Platinum / Custom plan says "Start Now." For a custom-scoped plan, "Get a Quote" makes more sense.

23. Some site-wide claims don't match the pages. The Lifecycle section lists 4 steps while the Services page lists 5 (adds Maintain). The Social Media page lists Instagram, Facebook and LinkedIn but not TikTok, which we pitch to clients.
24. The FAQ page asks the same question twice: "Do you work outside Calgary and Atlanta" and "Do you work with companies outside Canada and the USA."

🔵 Content and copy

25. Odd hero tags. "Saas / Apps / Web 3.0": Web 3.0 isn't a service we offer, and it should be "SaaS."
26. Missing spaces in the text: "search rankingsfor," "6 years,at," "onthe Home Screen," "UI & UXDesign," "DesignCompany." These may only be line-break issues, but check them on screen.
27. The About page "How We Work" list renders items 02–04 twice.
28. The tagline is overused. "One team from first sketch to still running two years later" is the subheading of four or more sections.
29. The blog looks abandoned or fake.
    - All three posts have the same date (May 20, 2026).
    - All three are tagged "Mobile App, UI/UX, Development," even though they're about social media, conversion and SEO.
    - There's no author.
    - The cards don't appear to link to actual post pages.
30. Mixed spelling and naming. The site uses both "colour" and "optimization," and both "DigitizeHub" and "Digitize Hub." The footer says "FAQ's" instead of "FAQs."
31. Every process step uses the same rocket icon.

⚙️ SEO and technical

32. Every page has the same title and meta description ("DigitizeHub — Web, Apps and SEO"). For an agency selling SEO, this is the first thing a savvy lead or competitor will notice.
33. The footer phone link is malformed (`tel:++1929...` with a double plus), so it may fail on some phones.

34. Possible broken branding video. The Branding page loads `Branding-logo-design.mp4` while the Services page loads `branding-logo-design.mp4`. Vercel file paths are case-sensitive, so one of these may 404.
35. One video file has a space in its name (`/videos/Social Media.mp4`). Rename it to avoid encoding issues.
36. Videos are reused across projects. Finovate and Orbitly share the same video, as do Packsy and Routely.
37. The site is likely heavy. Images are served at 3840px, there are many autoplay videos, and the name wall is duplicated four times in the page. Run PageSpeed Insights before launch.
38. Domain setup before going live. When moving to digitizehub.net, set canonical URLs and noindex the vercel.app copy so Google doesn't index both.
39. Lead routing is untested. The forms weren't submitted during this review. Do a test submission and confirm where leads land; ideally they should go straight into our CRM.

Priority

Items 1–6 are what would make a lead leave or distrust us, so fix those before sending the link to anyone.
